Timothy Ballan : A History of Text Messages Sent to a Baby Bear (Without One Response) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A History of Text Messages Sent to a Baby

Bear (Without One Response):

Hello! My name is Hickory Liu and this is my hobo. Come inside! Have a shuck! This book is a compilation of text messages that I've sent to a baby bear over time. Although he has never responded, I can only hope that the publishing of this book will get his attention and win him over. I love him more than life. Please enjoy reading this absurd book, and keep it out on a coffee table or anywhere else where it will fit! It is the perfect conversation starter or ender. (However, it is not appropriate for either crazy or sane children.) My greatest hope, though, is that this book will help others converse more successfully than I have ever been able to. I can't even get a response from my only friend, the titular baby bear. :(

About the Author Timothy Ballan is a composer and writer who currently resides in Western Massachusetts. As a composer, Timothy mostly writes accessible classical music. As a writer, Timothy mostly writes plotless stories, atmospheric vignettes, poems, and non-pretentious philosophy. When not composing or writing, Timothy leads several musical groups in urban youth development programs, teaches private piano lessons, and tutors youth in various academic subjects. In his free time, Timothy enjoys driving on country roads, hiking, watching scary movies, and sharing time and an absurd sense of humor with his human and mint-flavored bobby-pin friends.
