Some are humorous like "Heaven is hotter than Hell" (p. 106) and some are more serious like "N rays" (p. 77). I routinely use "Alpher, Bethe and Gamov" (p. 70) as well as "N rays" in classroom discussions of scientific ethics. And there is even a you-tube version of "Turboencabulator" (p. 105) - but the written version is just as enjoyable.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy Steve JakubowskiSome dated bits but overall one of the greatest collections I have on my bookshelf0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Three StarsBy Brian KnowlesSeverely abridged version of original book

This anthology provides an insight into the wit and intellect of the scientific mind through a blend of amusing and serious contributions written by and about scientists. The contributions record changing attitudes within science and mirror the interactions of science with society.

"... entertaining, pleasing and stimulating anthology ..." -- Europe and Astronomy
