this is fiction or a memoir, but either way it is a marvelous fun read. To me it feels like a memoir and it was written so well that I felt I was there and experiencing it all. The walks on the moors...the renovations and best of all the dogs. The descriptions of everything were so well done that you could see, feel, taste and experience the entire adventure. I laughed out loud so many times that now my husband has said he must read it too. I tried to read certain passages out loud to him and was mostly successful even though I had to stop frequently and try to control my laughter. The parts that bring tears to the eye will have to be experienced by himself as I would never have been able to choke a sentence out. The whole concept of living a simple life is refreshing and certainly makes one think. I deducted one star since a 5 star review is usually assumed to be written by a friend or relative. I am neither and would recommend this book to everyone. 5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. Brilliant, Witty, and Laugh Out Loud Funny! By Kay Dawson I just finished reading An Irish Tail and it was hands down the funniest book I have read all year! The story follows this delightful English couple as life events lead them to move to a very rural part of Ireland. However, they find themselves in one crazy predicament after another as they visit Ireland for the first time to go house hunting and as they try to repair and upgrade the home they eventually purchase. At the same time the story follows the couple's adorable canine companions, who also have their share of adventures and comical situations. This story is incredibly well written with brilliant comical satire that seriously made me laugh constantly. I kept running to my husband to share parts of the story with him. He's reading it now and we both love it and recommend it to everyone. This is definitely one of the best books I have ever read, as it is pure enjoyment throughout! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Enjoyable By Patti Wilson I love how the author blends his and his wife's move to Ireland, with great stories of their dogs. They find an old farmhouse and together renovate it while creating a vegetable garden and collect several homeless dogs along the way. The idea is to be self sufficient and anxiety free from their old life in England. It's beautifully written, entertaining, and connects the reader like one of the family. It's one of the best resettlement memoirs I have read. The love of this middle aged couple for each other and to make this new home based on mutual respect just goes to show that true, everlasting love exists.

A hilarious tale of dogs, fogs, bogs and moving to Ireland. For many years, Nick and Lesley Albert had shared a dream of living far away from the stress of modern life, and when the opportunity arose, they jumped in with both feet. Almost overnight, they decided to move to beautiful County Clare, in the west of Ireland – a Country they had never before visited. With little experience or money they set about renovating a derelict farmhouse and building a new life together - hindered only by their lack of skill, twenty-two chickens, two ducks and several unruly dogs. Bursting with comical anecdotes and witty observations, blended with occasional moments of exquisite sadness, this is a delightful true story of an English couple searching for a new life in the quiet solitude of rural Ireland. "Marley and Me" meets "Around Ireland with a Fridge." If you love dogs, Ireland and life, then you will adore "An Irish Tail".
