By Gina Briganti I laughed the first time I sat down to enjoy my morning non-fiction read with "Are We Normal: Funny, True Stories From an Everyday Family", which is a great sign when the book has funny in the title. It's a big claim, and I don't believe it until I've laughed a few times. If the title included all of the adjectives I would give to it, it would read, "Are We Normal: Funny, True, Touching, Wise, Loving Stories from a Humble Everyday Family". Growing up in their house sounds like something most of us would sign up for. A favorite story for me is "The Ten-Year Plan for Vehicles". The punch line was so funny I had to read the story out loud. I also loved "Apples", "Toilet Paper", and the pet stories. Bobber, one of their beloved pet cats, was a riot. We can all empathize for what it feels like when we've lost a family member, as they did with Bobber. I sincerely hope that Christine Scalise writes more humor stories. I'm waiting.

By Dan Clarke A lot of these little slice of life stories are amusing and downright hilarious especially if you have the attitude it's better to laugh than cry. With my three year old child, I recently had to buy her a winter coat, by the time we were done I had probably lost a fair bit of my rapidly thinning hair. Reading about Christine Scalise adventure with boot shopping, a few days later, I was able to begin seeing the humour in the situation and look back with not a fond smile, but at least without a frown. I particularly liked the cat stories. Of course I'm biased having three cats of my own, but I was literally laughing out loud several times, much to the annoyance of my wife. This book is a bit like exchanging parenting stories with a friend. It was done with a good sense of humour, a bit of wit, and a touch of exasperation at some of the problems that arise. It's not for everyone though. If you don't like listening to parenting stories or if you prefer things to be a bit more serious, this isn't for you. For me however, it's 5 stars.
