It helps that I raised a girl and 3 boys too. Girl going into womanhood - check; rambunctious boy children - check; helpful husbands - check, check. And more recent memories: being a writer - double check. So before I visit my grandchildren or when I sit down to edit a story one more time or when life is tough in general and I just want a no-calorie, non-alcoholic pick-me-up, I open Stacey's book to the table of contents, find an old favorite, and have a good laugh. Today's choice - The Universal Women's Lament - and by the way, when ARE men going to learn to build better women's public restrooms?9 of 9 people found the following review helpful. Prepare to laugh!By E. WrennStacey has found the comedic side of life with her family relating stories that I found to be both laugh-out-loud hilarious and sweetly nostalgic . I found I could not put the book down, chuckling at certain anecdotes, howling with laughter at others. Stacey has found the magic spot of writing about her life that stays in neutral territory; she is neither too self-deprecating nor does she take others down in the process. It is a refreshing read, and one that I am more than willing to pass along to my friends. Looking forward to reading more of her work!7 of 7 people found the following review helpful. TP, duck tape, and teenagers - this book has it all!By Chris DeanStacey takes the hectic life of a modern family and spins it around to find the humor. Whether it's an evening at the theater where she's dragging a tp trail with the seat cover popping out of her skirt or describing her Dad's mastery of Duct Tape Engineering, she had me giggle snorting from the first to the last page.I would recommend this book to anyone who live with teenagers, enjoys poking fun at life, or simply likes a good, clean laugh.

#1 Amazon Best Seller in Parenting Family Humor and Motherhood

"Gustafson covers much the same ground as Erma Bombeck, but updated for the 21st century, with a splash of Seinfeld-esque observational humor mixed in. (Why do take out restaurants that serve heaping portions of greasy, sloppy food invariably give you just one dinky napkin with your order? And, more important, what can you do about it?) Gustafson can be grouchy, but she's never mean-spirited, and while she complains freely about her hubby and kids, she's clearly, at heart, a loving wife and mom. - Roz Warren, Huffington Post er."Stacey Gustafson's hilarious collection of stories had me laughing aloud almost instantly. Through her words, she captures the everyday moments of life, marriage and surviving crazy situations in ways that are funny and thought-provoking. This is a book Erma Bombeck would be proud to read!" - Dahlynn McKowen, CEO and publisher of Publishing Syndicate LLC, including the highly successful Not Your Mother's Book anthology, and co-author for Chicken Soup for the Soul"Humor columnist Stacey Gustafson puts a lighthearted spin on marriage, family, and life's frustrations while delving into the chaotic depths of suburbia. She has an incredible wit to her writing; combining humor with the realities of raising a family and experiences of life as a contemporary woman." - Penny Warner, Agatha Award for Best Juvenile Mystery and author of over 50 books, fiction and non-fiction including, most recently, How to Host a Killer Party series."Peek inside the world of suburbia and life beyond through streaky, rose-colored glasses. It's not always pretty and you'll scratch your head wondering, "Are you kidding me?" but that's okay! Stacey Gustafson tackles midlife mishaps, family chaos, and epic bathroom adventures on her own terms with her own personal style of humor." - Leighann Lord, comedian, named one of New York's 10 Hottest Comics and author of the popular humor blog, The Urban Erma.About the AuthorStacey Gustafson is an author, humor columnist, and blogger who has experienced the horrors of being trapped inside a pair of SPANX. Her work has appeared in Chicken Soup for the Soul and Not Your Mother's Books, among other publications. She lives in California with her husband and two teens.
