A book of remarks by college students By Customer This is a paperback edition of a hardbound book which came out a few years ago under the title Non Campus Mentis. It is a delightful book containing things college students have written on exams or term papers. Read it slowly because your brain will probably send to your eyes what should have been written so you could miss the humor. Makes a person wonder how some of these students actually made it to college. 5 of 6 people found the following review helpful.

Death Rates Exceeded One Hundred Percent In Some Towns By Robert I. Hedges This is an absolutely amazing collection of 'works' by college students from the US and Canada, and will make you fear for the future. My Dad was an English professor at a four year university for his adult life and was amazed by some of the stuff that crossed his desk. One of my best friends is an English professor at a four year university, and is even more stunned by what crosses his desk. After listening to them grouse, I got a degree in biology and became an airline pilot. This collection spans several decades of student essays and exams from a history professor and some of his associates. There are so many delightful errors in this book that I can't pick a favorite, but I will share three selected at random: "The Russian revolution of 1905 began about 1907. Unfortunately, the Czar was easily influenced by flutterers. The Triple Alliance faced NATO. This too was produced by Bismark, who worked for Caesar at the time." "Japan boomed Pearl Harbor, the main U.S. base in southern California. American sailors watched in shock as the sky filled with Japanese zebras." "History grunderd onward. International relationships moved to the broodle stage." As you can see, there is no stopping the silliness (and, yes, I did recheck the spelling in the three examples to ensure it was exactly as written)! Buy this book! You may never laugh this hard again! 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Funny funny funny! By P. Stang This book is one of the funniest books I have ever read. The original title of the book was "Non Campus Mentis". It is excerpts from college student's term papers on a variety of subjects of a historical nature. I have shared this with many friends and highly recommend they either borrow it or buy it. It is so funny! I just think about this book and start laughing. The cover of the book states "mangled moments of history from actual college students." It is both amazing and probably scary in some of the mistaken words and beliefs from the youth of our nation - and hilarious! I recommend it to everyone I meet - if they want a good laugh.

.com Be prepared to weep as you read Non Campus Mentis: World History According to College Students, a horrifically hilarious compendium of actual North American college student essays. Learn about the victims of the Black Death (who "grew boobs on their necks"), the Automaton Empire, Martin Luther King's famous "If I Had a Hammer" speech, the Iran Hostess Crisis, Zorroastrologism (the "duelist" religion "founded by Zorro"), and Joan of Ark, Noah's wife, at rest on Mt. Arafat. Meet Dim El Sum of Korea, the Vestigal Virgins, "dedicated to burning the internal flame," and Hitler, who "shot himself in the bonker." Did you know a position as "lady-in-mating helped a young girl's chances for a marriage," and "the assignation of Archduke Ferdman gave sweet relief to mounting tensions," or that "the major cause of the Civil War is when slavery spread its ugly testicles across the West"? Well, you'd better buckle down and learn, then! --Tim Appelo "You'll laugh until you cry..." -- The Baltimore Sun From the Back Cover Mangled Moments of Western Civilization from term papers blue book exams. From college students' own authentic and inimitable voices comes a collection of bloopers, malapropisms, revisionist hypotheses, and creative interpretations of history, the subject that grinds our critical, seething minds to a halt.
