Alex has her babies (plural!) while she's graduating from MIT and Zonk and Zip become the third generation of Doonesbury characters to inhabit Hunter S Thompson's house. I mean, if it were really HST's house, which of course it probably isn't. Legal cannabis finally catapults Zonk into an actual paying career, and when he and Zip are perceived as "together," they leverage their product for the gay cannabis connoisseur. Zonk has come a long way from being a stoner football player at Walden, and Joanie has just Had It with her "Red Rascal" son, her coworker's attempt to fix her couture, and her wacky daughter, but now she's a great-grandmother. And, very gratifyingly, the "open office" situation is pissing off Mike's and Kim's employees, as open office should rightfully piss off everyone. I only wish these Doonesbury compendia had EVERY SINGLE daily cartoon in them.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Still a keen observer with a biting wit.By DocI've been reading Doonesbury for years and Trudeau has allowed the characters to age and change, while always keeping their core appeal. He remains the gold standard of wry, but piercing commentary about everything from war to wages, pot to politics. I look forward to these collections and this one did not disappoint. Thank you for over 40 years of brilliant storytelling, and indelible characters.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. another great doonesbury collectionBy Yrmotherof course i loved it. great addition to my complete collections of doonesbury books.

What a long, strange strip it's been! Doonesbury has managed to be articulate, abrasive, political, compassionate, misunderstood, misprinted, and outrageous—but one thing it's never been is complacent. Garry Trudeau's creation has chronicled American history and culture in a parallel universe. And through it all, Doonesbury has always been honest, entertaining, and way, way cool. “I don't read Doonesbury. He glorifies drugs.” —Former White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater

Welcome to the age of pivots. Two centuries after the Founding Fathers signed off on happiness, Zonker Harris and nephew Zipper pull up stakes and head west in hot pursuit. The dream? Setting up a major grow facility outside Boulder, Colorado, and becoming bajillionaire producers of “artisanal” marijuana. For Zonk, it's the crowning reset of a career that's ranged from babysitting to waiting tables. For Walden-grad Zip, it's a way to confront $600,000 in student loans. Elsewhere in Free Agent America, newlyweds Alex and Toggle are struggling. Twins Eli and Danny show up during their mother's MIT graduation, but a bad economy dries up lab grants, compelling the newly minted PhD to seek employment as a barista. Meanwhile, eternally blocked writer Jeff Redfern struggles to keep the Red Rascal legend-in-his-own-mind franchise alive, while aging music icon Jimmy T. endures by adapting to his industry's new normal: “I can make music on my schedule and release it directly to the fans.” He's living in his car.

G.B. Trudeau's Doonesbury is now in its fifth decade, and has chronicled American life through eight presidents, four generational cohorts, and innumerable paradigm shifts. His political sitcom Alpha House, starring John Goodman, is available on DVD and by streaming from Amazon Prime. For the record, Trudeau always inhaled back in the day. As President Obama once explained, “That was the point.”

About the Author G. B. Trudeau has been drawing his Pulitzer Prize-winning comic strip for more than forty years. In addition to cartooning, Trudeau has worked in theater, film, and television. He also has been a contributing columnist for the New York Times op-ed page and later an essayist for Time magazine. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts Sciences. He lives in New York City with his wife, Jane Pauley. They have three grown children.
