It's a flip-type book divided into three segments. Two segments consist of 63 different adjectives in each and the third section is 63 nouns. You randomly flip each section to come up with assorted insults. It really gets me laughing and is an innocent way to tell someone what you really think of them...You fensucked, onion-eyed, bed swerver! Or maybe you'd prefer to be called a churlish, clay-brained, scullion. And there's nothing like being called a pernicious, knotty-pated, clackdish. People will be laughing too much to know they've been insulted. It's just a lot of fun.16 of 17 people found the following review helpful. Look for the edition that includes references; it's more fun!By Cooper TracyThis edition disappointingly does not include the flip side references from which Shakespearean works each wonderfully ribald insulting noun or adjective is drawn. Look for the edition that includes those references....it's more fun!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. SHAKESPEARE LIVES - and you get to laugh!By mrs.peapodI love Shakespeare and when I need to insult someone but don't want to be vulgar, I use phrases from Sarah Royal's hilarious Shakespearean collection of zingers. Actually, if you rattle off one of Shakespeare's ever-most-brilliant lines, most people won't even know you've insulted them but YOU get to walk away with a grand sense of satisfaction without getting arrested for profanity in public. Too wonderful! AND you can flip the tri-cut pages in this sturdy little book to make your OWN concoctions! What could be better, you swag-bellied miscreant?

A Shakespearean insult generator that creates tart-tongued and totally humorous bawdy combinations and clever comebacks. Some occasions call for foul language, but why resort to the common F-word? If you must be offensive, hearken back to the Elizabethan days for more salacious and outrageous word choices. Impress your friends with your mastery of lewd iambic pentameter and vanquish your enemies with the power of the bard. After all, a toad-spotted maggot by any other name would be as pestilent . . . Mix and match to come up with your own raucous rebuffs, including: Thou Foul-Reeking Lily-Livered Codpiece! Thou Ruttish Rump-Fed Pignut! Thou Beslubbering Cockeyed Canker-blossom! Thou Churlish Dull-Eyed Hag And more!

About the Author Sarah Royal has spent the past few years in New Jersey, New York City, and Chicago, and has absorbed a great deal of creative profanity from all three filthy environments. She's a writer who has published articles, stories, essays, and zines. She lives in Portland, Oregon. Jillian Hofer has worked behind the scenes in enough restaurants to have heard a smorgasbord of indignities guaranteed to keep her talking like a sailor for a lifetime. She lives with her husband and son in Rye Brook, New York.
