Beatrice Cook : Till Fish Us Do Part: The Confessions Of A Fisherman's Wife before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Till Fish Us Do Part: The Confessions Of A Fisherman's Wife:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. absolutely the best place on the planetBy Amy F.My name is Robert Cook, a grandson of Beatrice Cook, who wrote Till Fish Us Do Part, More Fish To Fry and Truth Is Stranger Than Fishin'. One of her sons, Robert C. Cook, was my father with my uncle, William Cook, a long-time resident, with his devoted wife, Elaine, on Waldron Island, WA., were key characters in each book. I can tell you without reserve that my grandmother was probably the funniest human being I've ever met. If you are a fan at all of the San Juan Islands, you really need to do yourself a favor and get these gems of life in the San Juans as she details back in the day when life was as simple as fishing for salmon off of, say, Disney Point on Waldron Island. This was in 1944, where my grandfather, William Bell Cook, an M.D. in Seattle, decided he wanted a fishing "cabin" on Orcas Island. He then arranged for the sale of all of the lots on the West-facing lots of the West Beach tract to friends and family. Thus became "The Cook House," on West Beach. Probably, well, no, absolutely the best place on the planet. Ever.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I still have the book and it long ago became my favorite reads of all timeBy CustomerI picked up this book at a flea market when I was about 12 years old. That was 40 years ago. I still have the book and it long ago became my favorite reads of all time. I re-read it once a year or so. I vacationed on Orcas Island some years back and found the house the Cooks had built and told us about towards the end of the book. The motorboat was even still in the garage! I lived in the Seattle area for some time and was able to retrace some of the trips taken in that book, what an absolute treat. Buy and read the book, I promise you won't be disappointed.
