Bravo PeterBy CustomerObviously I cannot be objective about this book because I lived it, right along with Peter, Luke and Jill. Yes, I'm baby Ellen, whose orange hair was nothing but a mass of ringlets! I will share with you that I laughed and I cried, reliving that time in our lives. I also can say that Peter nailed it! His way of writing about it was captivating, and for me mostly hysterical! I hope you will get a copy, because I know you will thoroughly enjoy it. Bravo Peter, bravo! I'm so proud of you and am honored to be your sister. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Total enjoyment! By CustomerCharming book about a time and place when life was easier and being young was as it should be - pure innocence and adventure. Hysterical and honest, Gordy's conversational tone makes you feel like you were there seeing the country and all its grown-up struggles through the eyes of a child. The short, well-written chapters break the book into easy-to-digest stories. I would easily recommend this book to anyone. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. ... is a light hearted tale of what it is like living in a small town in the 5060 By paul young The toadsuck tales is a light hearted tale of what it is like living in a small town in the 5060. Having fun and how you lived. It is very entertaining and how things were during this time. You will laugh out loud. It is a good book of tales.

Toadsuck Tales is a collection of stories about what really happened growing up in the South in the 1950's. A young doctor, his beautiful, outlandish wife and their four children shock the little backwater town where they run wild and free. Marijo, leading with a Pall Mall in one hand and an Old Crow and Coke in the other, herds the four youngsters from one adventure to another. Leaving Luke, the oldest, to exclaim, "Jake LaMotta!" You will too.

About the Author Peter Gordy is a writer who survived growing up in Toadsuck, Arkansas. He wrote the first nationally distributed newspaper column about raising children from a Dad's perspective. He's married, has two children who still like him and he lives in Atlanta.
